GOD'S TIME.

Grand is the leisure of the earth;
She gives her happy myriads birth,
And after harvest fears not dearth,
But goes to sleep in snow-wreaths dim.
Dread is the leisure up above,
The while He sits whose name is Love,
And waits, as Noah did the dove,
To see if she would fly to him.

He waits for us while house-keepings,
We beat about with bruised wings,
On the dark floods and water springs—
The ruined world, the desolate sea,
With open windows from the prime,
All night, all day, He waits sublime,
Unto the fullness of the time
Decreed from his eternity.

PRESIDENT JEFFERSON'S WATCH.

The Charlottsville (Va.) Chronicle says that Dr. W. C. Randolph, of Charlottsville, has Mr. Jefferson's silver watch. Lincoln, Mr. Jefferson's Attorney General, wore it at the inversion of the judges at the close of Adams' administration, before Jefferson was sworn into office. Mr. Lincoln appeared in the court at midnight and stated that he was ordered to take possession of the office and papers. "Why, Mr. Jefferson has not qualified," exclaimed the astonished Chief Justice. "Mr. Jefferson considers himself in the light of an executor, bound to take charge of the government until he is duly qualified," was the reply. "But it is not yet 10 o'clock," said Judge Marshall, taking out his watch. Mr. Lincoln pulled out his watch and, showing it to him said, "This is the President's watch and rules the hour."

HOW TO SMILE ARTISTICALLY.

Above all things remember that when your vis-a-vis begins with what promises to be a prolonged humorous narration, your face must instantly relapse into quiet. The smile may begin early in the story, but should be very slight and inconspicuous at first, gradually diffusing itself over the entire countenance and coming to a climax with the point of the story—either in actual laugh, or, better still, in a radiant smile of appreciation, to be on the verge of laughter, and a hundred times more effective for its reticence. No one who has made use of this method will ever return to the old, and inelegant system—tiring to yourself and unsatisfactory to your interlocutor—of beginning the facial audience, if we may so call it, at the highest pitch at the outset of his narration, and vainly endeavoring to keep up the strain upon the features to the end. The consequence of such a course is, that either the smile becomes hard and mechanical, or that precise moment need ed it altogether disappears, and you are forced to some clumsy substitute. This is the crowning art by which the art is hidden.—Scribner.

PRECAUTIONS AGAINST PREMATURE BURIAL IN MUNICH.

Pity the stranger who dies within the gates of Munich. Every one here is treated with equal injustice, be he friend or foe, friend or foe. The body of the deceased is taken almost immediately to the cemetery, where there is a chamber of death for its reception. A row of windows looking upon its many couches, and almost every hour there are anxious faces peering in through these windows at the bodies that are lie in state, side by side, until the hour of burial. Each body is dressed in its best; there are those who are borne to the exhibition hall in full robes; some are attired tastefully and some gaudily, for it is thought that their bodies may yet breathe again, and every precaution is taken to make this awakening as agreeable as possible. There are wires attached to the hands or breast, so that the least motion will communicate with an alarm bell, and at this strange summons the watchmen are prepared to rush to the assistance of the poor soul that has not yet escaped the trials of this life, but is delivered up to new suffering and a second death. Tradition says that once or twice this bell has rung, and the watchers are in terror to bear away the half-conscious body, ere it had knowledge of its gloomy surroundings.—Charles Warren Stoddard.

"KEEPING OFF THE FLIES."

The report of the Royal Zoological Society of Ice and states that "During the year the gardens sustained a heavy loss in the death of a beautiful lioness. The closing weeks of whose life were marked by an incident worthy of being recorded. The carnivora when in health have no objections to the presence of rats in their cages; on the contrary they rather welcome them as a relief to the monotony of existence, which constitutes the chief trial of a wild animal in confinement. In this case the case is different; for the ungrateful rats begin to nibble the toes of the occupant of the forest before his death, and accordingly to his discomfort. To save the lioness from this annoyance, a fine little terrier was placed in her cage, who was at first received with a surly growl; but when the first rat appeared, and the lioness saw the little dog toss him into the air, catching him with professional skill across the loins with a snap as he came down, she began to understand what the terrier was for. She coaxed him to her side, covered her paw around him and each night the little creature slept at the breast of the lioness, enfolded within her paws and watching that his natural enemies did not disturb the rest of his mistress. The rats had a bad time during those six weeks."

BRYANT AND EMERSON.

A correspondent of the Boston Times had a conversation with William Cullen Bryant recently, in the course of which the latter spoke of Mr. R. W. Emerson as follows: "The first time I ever saw him was under peculiar circumstances. I had heard of him as a prominent young man who would probably grow in his place in the public. I had read one production only from his pen—an article or essay or paper published in brochure form, entitled 'Nature.' It had arrested my attention and interested me much on account of the original philosophy contained in it. I was at that time a regular attendant upon Dr. Dewey's church services in this city. One Sunday morning I found on entering the church that Dr. Dewey had gone away and exchanged with some one whose name I did not catch. Presently up rose from behind the pulpit what I took to be a beardless boy scarcely out of his teens. But this outward appearance was youthful, his mind was sufficiently mature. He preached an able, remarkable sermon. I was puzzled to know who he could be. I had never seen his likeness; but by the time he had finished I had made him out. I became convinced that he could be no other than he whom the New Englanders or Bostonians were in the habit of calling at that time Waldo Emerson. I recognized his mind. He had photographed himself, so to speak, on his paper on 'Nature;' and I saw the likeness between it and his sermon that Sunday morning. After church I waited to be confirmed, and I had the pleasure of being introduced to Mr. Emerson. May heaven bless him, I give him a good wishes. I understand that he is in failing health, though a decade or two younger than myself." Speaking of himself and the reminiscences in a large measure of his journalistic duties Mr. Bryant said: "Now that I think my working days are over, but because I believe that younger people like my associates can better deal with the questions of to-day than I can. I am rather inclined to go to the past for my work." He said that he had some notion, in the course of a few years, laughingly, of translating the Georgics of Virgil. "He must have more employment in his time of life than daily journalism would give him. He thought he might give the Georgics next Summer out on his farm at Roslyn."

SILENT MEN.

Washington never made a speech. In the zenith of his fame he once attempted it, failed, and gave it up, confused and abashed. In framing the constitution of the United States the labor was almost wholly performed in committee of the whole, of which George Washington was the chairman. He spoke twice during the convention; but his words were so few that they could not fairly be termed speeches. The convention however acknowledged the master spirit, and historians affirm that, had it not been for his personal popularity and the sincerity with which he spoke, the constitution would have been rejected by the people.

Thomas Jefferson never made a speech. He couldn't do it. Madison, whose executive ability was almost without a parallel, said that his greatest trouble was in finding men of deeds rather than words. When asked how he maintained his influence over his superiors in age and experience, when commander-in-chief of the army in Italy, he said, "By reserve!" The greatness of a man is not to be measured by the length of his speeches or their number.

THE FASHIONS OF OLD PHILADELPHIA.

The dame of fashion in Philadelphia during the earlier part of the last century lived most probably on Market Street, below Third. There and on the river front the merchants had their dwellings and stores, usually under the same roof. Many of these merchants pursued a shipping trade to the West Indies and England, and from small ventures grew colossal fortunes almost as rapidly as Whittington's. Our "dame of high degree" had no carpet on her floors; her dress at home was plaintz, the brocade or satin being kept for state evening wear, while tambour muslins were left solely to the children. She had but little jewelry, but she followed far of the reports of English fashions, curled her hair down on her neck, or heaped it four feet high with oil and tow, straw or flowers. She rode on horseback or went in a sedan chair to pay visits. Her gardener and confidential servants slept on beds for many years. Her kitchen swarmed with slaves and white redemptionists. Once or twice a year Messrs. Willing and Morris and other shippers advertised a consignment of blacks for sale from the Barbary coast, and every incoming vessel brought emigrants, Irish or Palatines, whom the captain kept nailed under the hatchways until they were sold to some of the town's people. Many strange stories, tragical enough, have come down to us concerning these white slaves and their treatment. One was with Franklin, a fellow-apprentice in Keimer's shop; he was an Englishman, named Webb, belonging to a family of birth and property, who while at Oxford had become involved in debt, and been caught up in the fields by a "crimp," brought to America, and sold. About this time, too, James Janeys, afterward Lord Altham, was sold at the block in High Street to a Dutch farmer. His adventures formed the groundwork of "Roderick Random," and later for Charles Reade's "Wandering Heir." When there was any difficulty in managing these slaves, white or black, their mistress in town sent them up to the jail on High Street for as many lashes as she judged fitting.

When her husband received a visit from a friend from England, or the smaller neighboring town of New York, he usually gave him a lunch in the warehouse of crackers, sprats, wine and brandy, which having provoked an appetite, he was brought home to a state dinner, where our fashionable lady, being also a notable housekeeper, would set forth "decks, hams, venison, twenty sorts of tarts, syllabubs, wine, and brandy." In all probability they, with their guest, were invited out to supper (for Philadelphia hospitality is of ancient and sturdy growth), and ate again "turtle, sweetmeats, pies, and drank brandy, porter, and sherries." There are many manuscript journals kept by well-fed guests still existing, which testify to the zeal with which the hostesses catered for them, wine and brandy regularly punctuating every hour of the day as commas a sentence.—Rebecca Harding Davis, in Harper's for April.

WHY SILVER HAS GONE DOWN.

While our government and people have been debating the policy of issuing a silver coinage to redeem and retire the small fractional notes from circulation, quite a serious inquiry is going forward in England, as to the fall in price (or as some say the value) of silver, and to what degree this depreciation is likely to extend or continue in future. The causes of the fall in the price of silver have been discussed fully, and the Pall Mall Gazette traces the primarily to the greatly increased production which has taken place mainly in our own western mines. That paper places the total yield in 1860 at about one hundred and fifty thousand dollars, while in 1870 it was fifteen millions, a hundred times that of ten years earlier, while in 1872 it exceeded thirty millions. From 1860 to 1875, the production of silver from the American mines is estimated at two hundred and fifty millions of dollars, and it is further estimated that in the next five years more silver will be produced than in the last thirty. The Gazette then enumerates these further disturbing influences: While the mines have been doing their share, silver has been thrown on the market from other quarters. The German and the Dutch governments have withdrawn silver from circulation and sold it in the market. The Dutch are reversing the movement made twenty-five years ago, when, fearing a rise in gold, owing to the immense production of California and Australia, silver was made the standard. The Japanese have also adopted a gold currency, thus adding the weight of their silver to the market. France, Austria, Russia, Italy, Spain, like the United States, have been using inconvertible paper, and as the hard money countries use gold, silver has been but little in request for coinage. In France, Italy, Belgium, and Switzerland there is a so-called "Latin Union," to secure a uniform coinage, and to prevent being flooded with the German silver coins, the silver coinage is to be limited to twenty millions a year. These influences have brought about the very sharp depreciation of silver, of which we hear so much.

Other influences have been at work in other quarters. India was once the great abyssal for silver, but American cotton has regained its old place, while Indian cotton has taken off, and there is so much less demand for silver for that region. The question of how to prevent, or at least how to provide a remedy for this steady fall in silver is a very pressing one in India, both for the government and for the Europeans living in the East. The loss to the Indian government on its remittances to England, in the shape of interest on its debt, payment for supplies, salaries, etc., is estimated at nearly ten millions of dollars, nearly twelve per cent. on the amount involved. Every European resident in India and China suffers in the same proportion. The tax must be felt severely when it costs sixty cents to send a pound sterling from the East to London, twelve per cent. on five dollars. In view of these circumstances, the English Parliament has gone to work in its usually deliberate fashion, by appointing a Royal Commission to discover the principal causes of the depression in progress. Of course the real question at issue is now best to overcome the difficulty that is now spreading all over the world. The problems involved are very nice ones, and not without elements of difficulty and uncertainty. An elucidation of them on a nice of the water, from an American standpoint, would seem to be essential, in view of the contemplated substitution of silver for small notes. Our financial authorities, and especially Dr. Linderman, the director, are continuing keeping a strict watch upon the silver bullion market and are probably understand the subject as thoroughly as any one in London, though London fixes the price of silver as a commercial commodity.—Philadelphia Ledger.

RAIN ON THE SEA.

It is a common saying among sailors that heavy rain falling on the sea stills the motion of the waves—or, as they phrase it, the "rain soon knocks down the sea." Professor Osborne Reynolds, of Owen's College, Manchester, has made experiments which demonstrate that the saying is founded on fact; for when drops of water fall on the surface of water, they not only produce the usual rings, but they drive some of the surface water downward in series of rings which increase in size. To replace the water carried down, some of the under water would have to rise to the surface. "When," says the professor, "the surface is disturbed by waves, besides the vertical motion, the particles move backward and forward in a horizontal direction, and this motion diminishes as we proceed downward from the surface. Therefore, in this case the effect of rain-drops will be to convey the motion which belongs to the water at the surface down into the lower water, where it has no effect so far as the waves are concerned, and hence the rain would diminish the motion at the surface, which is essential to the continuance of the waves, and thus destroy the waves."

GEORGE ELIOT'S HEROINES.

Many of the women of this great novelist will be the delight of English literature as long as the language endures. The spiritual beauty of Dinah, the childish and involuntary selfishness and love of ease which give a strange pathos to the tragic fate of Hetty, the vague ardor of Dorothea, the calm amiability, but thorough unforeaveness, of Rosamond, all these, and many other feminine paintings by the same hand, will be historic pictures in our literature, if human foresight be worth anything, at least as long as Sir Walter Scott's studies of James and Mary Charles, and Elizabeth, and Mary Stuart, and Leicester are regarded as historic pictures. But George Eliot's heroines are certainly never likely to be remarkable for airiness of touch. It is not Sir Joshua Reynolds, but rather Van Dyck, or even Rembrandt, among the portrait painters, whom she resembles. She is always in earnest about her women, and makes the reader in earnest too—you cannot pass her characters by with mere amusement, as you can many of Shakespeare's, and some of Scott's, and not a few of Miss Austen's. There is the Puritan intensity of feeling, the Mitonic weight of thought, in all George Eliot's drawings of women. If they are superficial in character and feeling, the superficiality is insisted on as a sort of crime. If they are not superficial the depth is brought out with an energy that is sometimes almost painful. There is something of the large and grave statuesque style in all George Eliot's studies of women. She cannot bear to treat them with indifference. If they are not what she approves she makes it painfully, emphatically evident. If they are, she dwells upon their earnestness and aspiration with an a most puritanic moral intensity, which shows how eager she muses on her ideal of woman's life.

RAINING CATS.

The time has arrived when it is the duty of the Thoughtful Patriot to protest against the zoological showers which are occurring almost daily in one or another part of the country. When the first of these abnormal showers covered a Kentucky farm with fresh and bloody wise men felt that the rights of graziers and butchers had been unwarrantably infringed. Nevertheless, inasmuch as no one supposed that the performance would be repeated, and as it had been the means of making a number of Chicago reporters acquainted with the taste of meat, no one publicly found fault with it. In a week or two afterward a shower of fish occurred in Illinois. It so happened that this shower took place at the beginning of Lent, and therefore discreet people abstained from expressing their indignation, lest they should be unwarily drawn into a theological discussion. When, however, it was announced that a heavy rain of mosquitoes had fallen in Canada, there was a universal feeling that this sort of thing had been carried altogether too far. There is no demand whatever for an increased number of mosquitoes. The volume of those pests issued every Summer is always more than commensurate with the necessities of business, and any attempt at inflation in connection with mosquitoes must be vigorously withstood.

But the recent mosquito shower, bad as it was, has been eclipsed by a still more recent and objectionable shower which occurred in California. It was restricted to the narrow area of a single city lot on Van Ness Street, San Francisco; but it was of unparalleled violence and malignity. Early one evening the Van Ness Street family was quietly seated around the social centre-table, the father explaining to a casual Eastern visitor the unequaled beauties of the California climate, and the mother assuaging her baby by reading in a monotonous murmur the report of the day's sale of mining stocks. Suddenly a out battering was heard on the roof, mingled with the last despairing cry of some strong tom-cat in his agony. The battering and the cries increased, and a shower of heavy objects fell from the eaves and rattled on the pavement below. The whole family rushed to the front piazza, and by the increasing light of the full moon beheld scores of cats pouring from the roof. Cats of all sizes and colors were sliding over the shingles and turning wild somersaults in the air. The horrified family fled to the cellar, where they passed the night in denouncing the Weather Bureau, and vainly attempting to convince their Eastern guest that an occasional cat-shower in no way detracted from the unqualified excellence of the California climate. The shower did not last more than fifteen minutes, although it sprinkled cats at intervals until morning. When daylight came every fence-spike was ornamented with an impaled cat, and the yard was so thickly strewn with the dead and wounded that an experienced meteorologist who subsequently investigated the affair, reported that at least eight inches of cats must have fallen during the night. The theory put forth by this skeptical man of science in order to account for the shower hardly needs to be refuted. He invented a small boy, whom he accused of greasing the roof with imaginary butter, which caused some hundreds of cats, assembled on the ridge-pole to sing the praises of love and mice, to lose their footing. Inasmuch as he failed to produce either the boy or the butter, and also failed to explain how a boy could keep his footing on a greased roof, where the most skillful cats, even with the aid of four feet and fifty claws, could not maintain a position, we can only pity the weakness and despise the effrontery of the scientific sceptic.

It is sufficiently evident that this California cat-shower is the last of the kind which a free and proud people can permit. We have now had showers of flesh, fish, mosquitoes, and cats, and unless prompt measures are taken we shall presently be pelted with puppies and deluged with pitchforks. Men and brethren, shall these things be? Are we to silently permit the hands of the weather-clock to be turned back, and our customary showers of water to be superseded by showers of undesirable animals? Delay is dangerous. While we are yet speaking a wave of atmospheric cats may be approaching us from the Gulf; light showers of wasps and mosquitoes may be about to descend upon the New England and Middle States, and an area of cosmic pigs may be threatening the region of the lakes.—New York Times.

Much amusement has been caused in Paris by the letter from the Bishop of Orleans, in which he speaks of his election to the Senate as equivalent to his being placed like Daniel in the fiery furnace. The Univers reminds the Bishop that he ought to "search the Scriptures," and he would see that Daniel never was in the fiery furnace."

The wedding of Master Aaron Ward, of the United States steamer "Franklin," to a daughter of Richard Storrs Willis, will take place at the United States Legation, Paris, early in June, and friends of the interested parties predict an event of great elegance and magnificence.

Those who profess to be well informed assert that the marriage of Mr. Braccisa Johnson Smith to Miss Clara Louise Kellogg will take place in this city in a few weeks. For some reason, probably because it is customary, the parties concerned contradict current gossip on the subject.—Daily Graphic.

The forthcoming marriage of James II. is a subject of much talk and gossip in society, and the wedding, if held in church, will probably be attended by an immense throng of noted and fashionable people. Miss May's trousseau is said to have been prepared in Europe at an expense of $50,000.—Graphic.

The Pall Mall Gazette not having been educated by the perusal of catalogues of American schools, is shocked at finding in a "society" article that the names of nearly all American women end in "ie." It says of the list of names: "It looks to an English reader like a list of ballet girls engaged at a theatre for opera bouffe."

The name of our coming Imperial visitor, the Emperor of Brazil, says the New York Express, is "not Dom Pedro, as so many write, but Don Pedro. The former word, like the old word Dan, expressing the same thing, is obsolete, and the ancient respectability or honor of the title has gone with it. The Dom is Latin, and the Don Anglo-Saxon or Spanish. If the original was adhered to, it would be Lord Pedro."

Now that enthusiastic accounts of expensive dresses have become distasteful, the lady-writers in Washington have turned their attention to the feet of the queens of la mode. There is a great deal of discussion as to who really has the smallest foot, but it seems to have been decided in favor of a Philadelphia belle. It is told that a shoemaker in Brussels has asked for her last, for the reason that she has not only the smallest but the most perfectly formed foot he ever saw.

The journals of Constantinople—the Turquie, the Revue de Pera, the Levant Herald—are in unison in celebrating the success of the young, beautiful, and brava prima donna soprano Eda Mirani (Mrs. Minnie Reade, wife of Lieut. Reade, U. S. A.,) in the Ottoman capital. In "Linda" especially she was above all praise, interpreting in a manner unrivaled the difficult part of "Linda." The Mirani aroused a real enthusiasm, and was honored by interminable applause, flowers, and gifts.—Italian paper.

General Sherman says he will not return to Washington except in obedience to an order from the President or in compliance with law. He left for two reasons: first, it was not a fit place to educate his children; and second, the salary was not enough to enable him to live decently and keep up society appearances. What sort of a place is Washington when $13,500 will not support a man and his family? A man in General Sherman's position can well afford to make a good example of honesty and economy. A half-dozen people can live on less money than $13,500 a year, give occasional dinners, dress well, and save from $3,000 to $5,000 a year.—New York Express.

Lord Lytton had a curious experience before leaving London for India. The last London Spectator relates that he was invited to dinner at a club of which he was not a member, by another very distinguished person who was. The diplomatist and author accepted the invitation. On the appointed day the guest was late, so that the company were waiting for him, and on his arrival all immediately were proceeding to table when the head waiter interfered, said that the guest was not a member of the club, and must therefore withdraw. In vain the host expostulated and stormed; in vain the other guests grew argumentative and indignant; rules and regulations were triumphant, and the whole party had to adjourn to some more hospitable place.

Alexander Name has been doing a lucrative business at Laramie lately. He has been hooking the eastern states with circular letters, offering, in the name of the Black Hills Mining Company, to furnish employment to men in the Black Hills, and also in Colorado and New Mexico, and guaranteeing one year's work to a number accepting the offer. As an inducement for idlers to accept their offer they agree to furnish any one with a railroad pass to Laramie on receipt of $5. There are so many fools in the east that Name's receipts from that quarter have been very large.

The Las Vegas Gazette tosses this out to Colorado editors, at the same time doing injustice to Southern Colorado: "The first railroad which enters it to New Mexico will receive all its trade and secure the good will of the citizens to such an extent as will insure it the larger portion of the business for many years. The railroads are toiling away their time hunting for business in Southern Colorado. The country is not ripe to furnish business. At Pueblo, it is true, they reach the northern edge of the coal fields, and to extent of hundred of miles south of the Raton in New Mexico. If they want coal they can get it by coming to New Mexico, and if they want business they can get it by coming to New Mexico."

DEPARTMENT OF THE ROCKY MOUNTAIN CONTINENT.

Captain Van Vliet, afterwards Gen. Van Vliet, of the Federal Army, and now of the Quartermaster's Department at Washington, spent sixteen years on the great plains and in the Rocky Mountains. Many remarkable stories are told of his hunting adventures. He it was who killed fifteen elks one morning before breakfast. Captain Van Vliet kept a pack of greyhounds to chase wolves. He recorded the number of the wolves he killed until it reached six hundred, and he killed hundreds after this number had been passed. His habit was to allow his dogs to bring the wolf to bay, he following on horseback, he would then dismount, walk up the wolf and seizing him by the ears cut his throat. He built Fort Larimie in 1858 and Fort Kearney in 1847-8, and while on the plains collected the first geological specimens in the Platte Lands and sent them to the Smithsonian Institution.—New Orleans paper.

The tourists contemplating extended excursions among the Rocky Mountains of Colorado will be interested to know the progress of the government map of this Territory. They are now in the hands of the lithographer at a Philadelphia office in Washington in the course of transfer from the field-books to the draughtsman's sheet. These maps when finished will embrace the entire area of the Territory (except some 5,000 square miles in the northwestern corner), or about 100,000 square miles. They will be printed in the best style of lithographic art, by Julius Bien of New York, upon a scale of two miles per inch. The contour lines fixing the height and shape of the mountains are drawn, representing elevations 200 feet apart. To determine the position of these lines the height above the sea at least 10,000 points have been carefully determined by the barometer or trigonometrical levels. The library of the Rocky Mountain Club will be supplied with these maps as soon as they are prepared.

MANITOU.

MANITOU, April 12, 1876.

Our Manitou House continues to receive new visitors by every train from Denver and Pueblo. The people here believe that the town will this year make a forward movement in the way of building, surpassing all former achievements. We learn that a wholesale grocery, a banking house, and a large dry goods and clothing establishment will be opened here by the middle of June. It is also said that the large wholesale liquor establishment from Cincinnati, recently located at Colorado Springs, will remove to this place, the courts having decided that no liquor can be sold there without forfeiture of the titles to lots to the original proprietors.

Here at Manitou we are on the highway to the mountains. It is conceded that we hold the key to the trade of San Juan, Lake district, Fairplay, Alma, Chalk Creek, Breckenridge, Twin Lakes and in fact to all the mountain towns and mining districts west, between Denver and Pueblo.

There is nothing to prevent Manitou from controlling the immense mountain trade that passes through the Ute Pass to Denver, Pueblo and Colorado Springs. And the town is destined to be not only the gay and fashionable resort of Colorado, but the great center of its mountain trade. Major Hopkins, of the Manitou House, is our live man, and wields a large influence among eastern capitalists and business men. He gives us assurance that Manitou is to come to the front, and that arrangements to that end are nearly perfected.—Iron Springs Correspondent Denver Tribune.

INSTRUCTIONS FOR SILVER REDEMPTION.

It is gratifying to be able to chronicle one step by the government toward the resumption of specie payments. The following act of Congress has received the signature of the President and become a law:—

The silver bill, as passed by both houses of Congress, reads as follows:—

"Be it enacted, That there be and hereby is appropriated out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated the sum of $100,000, to provide for the engraving and printing and other expenses of making and issuing United States notes, and the further sum of $8,000 to provide for engraving and printing national bank notes, to be disbursed under the Secretary of the Treasury; that the Secretary of the Treasury is hereby directed to issue silver coins of the United States, of the denomination of ten, twenty, twenty-five, and fifty cents, of standard value, in redemption of an equal amount of fractional currency, whether the same be now in the Treasury awaiting redemption, or whenever it may be presented for redemption, and the Secretary of the Treasury may, under regulations of the Treasury Department, provide for such redemption by issue by substitution at the regular sub-treasuries and public depositories of the United States, until the whole amount of fractional currency outstanding shall be redeemed, but the fractional currency redeemed under this act shall be held to be part of the sinking fund provided for by the existing law, the interest to be computed thereon as in the case of bonds redeemed under the act relating to the sinking fund."

Quotations in New York and London quotations may be cited to show that the passage of this bill has worthily affected the market for silver bullion, an advance from $1.13 to $1.18 per ounce being already secured in New York, with a corresponding advance in London. This towards practical resumption has also helped greenbacks a higher place in the scale of value. The paper dollar is now worth eighty eight cents in gold, according to the government bulletin of silver resumption.

The fractional currency is out of the way, the people, by the last session of Congress, will be clamorous and go still further and redeem one and two dollar notes. This would make a market for, in round numbers, $150,000,000 of silver. Assume at once, there being a home market for our silver to that amount, it would rapidly appreciate in Europe because the great circulating medium of the trades people and lower classes of the world is silver coin, and the commercial necessities of the people must be fostered by all governments. England is sensibly alarmed at the depreciation of silver, and well she may be, as the East Indies is England's great market for silver. In fact, a the interior commerce of India is run by silver, even to the salaries of the officers of the government, and all expenditures made by England, which, in the aggregate, are enormous, to run the India government. All this expense is paid off in silver rupees. The British Parliament has already taken action to discover a way to stay this decline of silver.

The miners of Colorado have suffered but little from the decline that lately obtained in the price of silver, as it was more than fully offset by the increase in price for silver ores, which close competition of the smelters and mill men to offer and pay. The threatened permanence of the decline is now happily averted by the action of Congress, creating this new demand, for the possible amount of $42,000,000, the amount of the outstanding fractional currency.

The following regulations have been adopted and promulgated by the Secretary of the Treasury in pursuance of the above act:—

TREASURY DEPARTMENT, WASHINGTON, April 18.—By virtue of the authority vested in the Secretary of the Treasury by the second section of the act entitled "An act to provide for the deficiency in the printing and engraving bureau of the Treasury Department, and for the issue of silver coin of the United States in place of fractional currency," approved April 17, 1876, the several officers below named are hereby authorized, upon the presentation at their respective offices for redemption of fractional currency of the United States in sums of $5, or multiples thereof, assorted by denominations and in amounts not to exceed one hundred dollars, to issue therefor the amounts of silver coin of the United States, of the denominations of 10, 25, and 50; and further, upon the presentation for redemption at the office of the Treasury of the United States in this city, of any amount of such currency properly assorted and in sums not less than five dollars, the Treasurer is authorized to issue silver for the amount of currency presented, or he may issue his check payable in silver at either of the offices hereinafter named, at the office nearest the residence of the party presenting the currency. As far as may be practicable, from time to time, the fractional currency redeemed in silver under these instructions by any Assistant Treasurer, or by any designated depositaries of the United States, will be sent in sums of $1,000, or multiples thereof, to the Treasury of the United States in this city, the amount to be charged in the Treasurer's general coin account, and any amount of such currency for which silver has been paid shall be treated as coin assets. The currency shall be sent by express or otherwise to the officers below named for redemption, and by transportation of this circular should be accompanied by a letter of advice, stating fully the address of the sender, and how remittance in payment thereof is desired, and if by the Treasurers, the office at which the check should be made payable. The government will not pay express on silver issued. The offices herein referred to are as follows: The Treasury of the United States at Washington, United States Treasury at Boston, New York, Philadelphia, St. Louis, Charleston, New Orleans, Chicago, San Francisco, Baltimore, and the United States depositaries at Buffalo and Pittsburgh.

"HOW IT WAS DONE."

A worthy citizen, who is ever watchful for the public good, sends us the following, which we are pleased to publish as especially applicable to the present time and occasion in the history of temperance reform in our city.

To the Editor of the Gazette:—

In the Chicago Advance I find an article on prohibition as it is in Sterling, Ill., which think is practical, and very encouraging to our people, and especially to our new Board of Aldermen in the present crisis, which I may call their situation. Will not an account of the working of Prohibition in other places be interesting news to the readers of the GAZETTE?

G. H. S.

The beautiful city of Sterling, situated upon the Rock River, and now becoming known to the world by its manufacturing enterprise, has, until recently, been afflicted, like many of its sisters, with numerous liquor saloons.

Were a manufactory constructed upon the river bank to advance commercial interests, or a church upon the hills to promulgate Christian truth, several saloons would be sure to open between the two, to catch unwary citizens as they passed from one to the other, and thus the mill and church wages an uneven contest. They advanced slowly while the saloons enjoyed unbounded prosperity. Not content with his advantage, Satan, always subtle and ready to learn even from an adversary, imitated the example of Paul before the Sanhedrim, by stirring up a dissension amongst them, until some of the churches became so engrossed with their own difficulties that he was left free course to run and be glorified.

Finding that rowdyism and brutality, attendant upon saloons, were in urging his business in the minds of respectable people, he concluded to tone it up to meet the wants of an advancing civilization. A "high license" law was passed, which made three hundred dollars the sum to be paid the city for the privilege of selling liquor.

Some hoped this would balance the temperance interest, but alas for such hopes! It served to rob us of some of the worst places, but made those that do exist present a more inviting appearance. Gentlemen were now willing to visit some of them, for they were considered respectable, and thus the evil was enabled to reach up his hand and catch members of the most respectable families, thereby dragging down to perdition some who before had escaped his power.

Those who avored licensing saloons were greatly in the majority, and the temperance people felt discouraged as well as heart-broken at the turn they saw around them. Sadly they looked into each other's faces, exclaiming, "What can we do?" But a change came unexpectedly. The wave which the crusaders from Ohio set in motion reached here in its westward course; and, though it failed to sweep away the saloons or drown the keepers, it did lift the good ward ship Temperance out of the mud where it had long been lying. A hundred ton gun, cast in Heaven, and named Prayer, was added to the armament, and we enlisted to help work it, a new commander, the Lord Jesus Christ, was secured, and then, hoisting sail, an attack was once more made upon the foe.

Nothing unseemly was indulged in, no parading of streets, no stubborn praying upon sidewalks was countenanced, but taking the matter into the churches they addressed home work to the Christian people that intemperance is an evil which the disciples of Christ should unite in combating. So earnestly did they pleading for holiness, that churches, divided about the fundamental government, united in this work, and those of different denominations forgot their isms to present a solid front before the enemy. The Christian element of the whole city became roused with the determination to abolish intemperance. Daily union prayer meetings were held, not by the ladies alone, but by Christ in business men, from Jan 1 till the election in March, invoking God's support in the coming struggle. The subject was kept before the people, ministers preached, brethren prayed, the editors wrote, while those having been two-two opinions until the day of election. The battle was fought, manly man at the ballot box, and when the day was past, the startling bulletins counted, to everyone's surprise the temperance ticket was carried by about seventy five majority. Then came the shutting up of saloons, the prosecutions for violating the law, which followed one another so rapidly that the trade was almost abandoned. Some liquor was still sold in secret, yet soberly now regarded where drunkenness had existed before. Arrests immediately decreased, five to one.

Throughout the year the work was prosecuted in the same spirit in which it was begun—the churches always praying. Ministers, laymen, and women strove with heart and hands united. Their trust remained in God, and with renewed zeal they were enabled to carry the next annual election by an increased majority.

The second year of temperance rule passed, and we have just come out of the third election, where temperance was the only issue. Men prayed and voted. Women prayed and strengthened their husbands. The churches, by Sabbath services and election day prayer meetings, showed their heart espousal of the cause.

By these means public opinion had become so moulded that few respectable citizens could be found upon the side of license, and upon one's fingers could be counted all the professing Christians who would vote that ticket. As a result temperance has triumphed with a much larger majority than ever before, notwithstanding the license party resorted to every conceivable trickery in support of their cause. With such a record Sterling can now be called a temperance city.

In giving these facts to the public I would only add, is not this a true solution of a difficulty which is at present in many communities? "Other foundation can no man lay than that is laid which is Jesus Christ." When the churches—but let him as their chief corner stone—will enter united upon the practical work of saving men from evil by preventing intemperance, shall they not succeed? Sterling has done it.

Let them, while leading men to Christ with one hand, become combative enough to knock the devil over by a back-handed blow from the other, and God will be glorified. A. B.

THE RELIGIOUS DIFFICULTY IN THE UNITED STATES.

We extract from an article in the Pall Mall Budget on the religious difficulty in the United States, the following statement of the "School Question" which has occasioned considerable comment and is likely to enter somewhat into our next Presidential canvass:—

While the Roman Catholics were few, they either made the best of the public schools or set up voluntary schools by the side of them. Now that they have become a powerful minority commanding sufficient votes to turn an election if the contending parties are equally balanced, they are no longer so patient. The injustice of Catholics being educated, while paying for the same time for Catholic schools in which their children are educated, has of late been much insisted on in Episcopal pastorals; and the remedy suggested is that the school fund may be raised as at present, but that when raised it shall be divided proportionately among Catholics and Protestants. This proposal has called forth two forms of opposition, a Protestant form and a Secularist form. The Protestant opposition is mainly interested in the maintenance of the public school system as it is, including the reading of the Bible "without note or comment", and the use of Protestant hymns and prayers. Its leaders care not concern themselves with the consistency of their position, but they are "doggedly resolved" to keep the public schools Protestant. There is a minority of this opposition, however, which looks that a State that insists on the public recognition of a particular religion in elementary schools is bound to go farther and insist on the public recognition of this same religion in its constitution. This object is to be attained by a constitutional amendment which shall insert into the preamble of the constitution a recognition of God as the author of national existence and the source of civil authority; of Jesus Christ as the ruler of nations; and of the Bible as the fountain of law and the supreme rule of national conduct. There is a third section of the Protestant opposition, which proposes to avoid the necessity of either making or revising concessions to the Catholics by doing away with the State schools altogether and leaving the provision of education to the energy of parents and philanthropists. The Secularist opposition also proposes to attain its ends by means of a constitutional amendment. Its demands are nine in number, and comprise not only the exclusion of the Bible and of prayers or hymns from public schools, but also the taxation of ecclesiastical property, the abolition of chaplains in the army or navy and in prisons, the repeal of all laws which enforce the observance of Sunday or imply a recognition of Christian morality as such. The partisans of both the constitutional amendments, the "Christian amendment," and the "religious amendment," are fanatical enthusiastic in support of their respective views, and each party is to hold a "convention" in Philadelphia during the coming Summer. There is no want here of materials for a religious conflict of dimensions large enough to content even American ambition, and none of the suggested solutions seem at once sufficient in themselves and likely to be accepted as sufficient by the majority of the American people.

MINING NOTES,

REPORTED WEEKLY BY

THE COLORADO SPRINGS MINING AGENCY.

EL PASO COUNTY.

The work of sinking on several of the lodes on Chapin Mountain has been prosecuted vigorously the past week, and in every instance with encouraging results indicating from appearances, as but one assay has been had, and this of a sample different in its composition from any before found. The sample was taken from a depth of six feet, and gave return of over $17 in gold and silver to the ton. The most encouraging features of the developments made are the increase in quantity and appearance of the quartz, and the concentration of the same in defined seams big or near the walls. Openings were begun at a depth of from 8 to 12 feet or over has been reached on veins near the foot of the mountain the quartz shows unmistakable signs of the uriuri. The gangue of most of these is porphyry, and are cavies rather than fissures.

The results of the 8 tons from the Ute Pass Mine at Manitou, sent to Black Hawk for treatment by stamping and amalgamation, has just been received. This is very far from what was expected, judging from the numerous assays made of the ore by Kerr & Robinson, and Terry, of this place, Prof. Scharmer of the Denver Mint, and in Central and other places, and shows conclusively that the treatment was unsuited to the ores. The total yield of the 8 tons was 1 oz. 5½ dwts. The assays ranged from 10 to 109 dollars to the ton, averaging, from average samples, over $50 go the value to the ton, of which over 90 per cent. was gold, remainder silver. After the ore had been shipped a number of experienced mill-men, among whom was Mr. Sperry, of the firm of Morey & Sperry, of New York, expressed grave doubts in regard to the saving of the gold by the process by which this was treated. The ore of this mine being peculiar to itself its treatment determines nothing in regard to the treatment of the ores of other mines, but leaves the question of their free milling ores more doubtful. The return received from a smaller lot sent from a vein in the same vicinity gave no return above the highest assay obtained from the lot. The result, though a disappointment to the owners, does no impair their confidence in the value of the mine. Tests by other processes are being arranged for.

A large sample of ore from the Colorado City Hole, situated at the head of Red Cañon, west of Colorado City, was left at our office this week. Portions of this could be seen from some of the richest silver bluffs of Sunshine when placed side by side with them. As the amount of minerals in this class of ore cannot be judged of by appearances unless very rich, we cannot say that the sample from the Colorado City location bears the same amount of minerals as like appearing samples from the other mines.

Also a sample from a fissure not far from Cheyenne, quartz, and iron and copper pyrites, which looks very promising. The vein from which this was taken is about four feet, between walls and nearly vertical. The fine showing just been made, no assay has been had.

Good progress has been made the last week in the tunnel which is being run to cut the Highland Mary lode, and a few days more will reach the lode. This is in the Ute Pass a short distance above the Jungle mill.

We have not learned anything of the progress which has been made in the opening of the galena-bearing lode higher up the Creek.

Mr France, who has for some months past, been engaged in running a tunnel near 200 feet through a deposit of soil and rock to the coal which underlies his ranch, has at last reached the solid vein, and is now delivering coal of a fine quality in the city. The point from which the coal is taken is about 100 feet below the surface of the ground, which depth will be rapidly increased as the drift advances, running as it does under rising ground. The vein is nine feet in thickness of solid coal without slate. The ranch is directly east of Colorado Springs, distant eight miles.

A mile or two east of this, the Wilson Bros. have a bank opened, which they have worked two years past, supplying a considerable portion of the city and country. For a time, even until lately, this coal was sold by reason of lack of cars, but at present, and hereafter the coal is and will be much superior to that previously delivered, by reason of the greater depth now attained. The extent of the coal deposit is sufficient for all coming time. The coal is nearly if not entirely free from sulphur.

LAKE COUNTY.

Mr. Bent, superintendent of the Catherine Mine, situated on the Fairplay road this side of South Park, says the mine is looking well; crevice six feet between walls, with strong vein of ore. Work for the present has been suspended until the question of title is cleared up. A mistake is thought to have been made in locating and recording the mine.

Mr. Bent showed us a specimen of gray copper ore near the Fairplay road in the mountains forming the eastern rim of South Park which is as promising as anything we have seen. The percentage of copper cannot be less than 60-100 in the specimen shown, which was sent to the Denver mint for assay.

Other discoveries are reported from Park county, but no particulars received.

LA PLATA COUNTY.

Mr. Roberts, of Decatur district, near head waters of Animas river, called upon us on his return from Denver to the mines. He has given us the latest and clearest account of the gold-bearing fissures of this wonderfully rich mining region we have yet received. We take it from what he has said that the richest and most important discoveries made there were made the present winter.

The elevation of the river at the point where he is located is about 8,000 feet. Snows were frequent during the winter and at one time lasting to the depth of six feet, but they never lie long owing to the warm winds from the Pacific, which come up from the gulf of California through the valley of the Colorado. The lowest temperature of the winter was —5.0, and many days rising to 50° in mid winter. Mining was carried on all winter, the men working without coats a most every day.

The gold-bearing quartz is found in true fissures, in a porphyry country rock, and vary in width from 6 to 25 feet. The quartz is honeycombed, and assays made of it at the mint in Denver showed from 20 to 500 dollars to the ton, gold. It is not to be supposed that the average of the assays made are the average of the ore of veins, for no doubt a number of them were made from choice specimens. Mr. Albert thinks the ores will run from 20 to 40 dollars to the ton. The total cost, mining and milling, where the veins are adjacent to mills run by water, cannot be above eight dollars per ton.

The range between these mines of the Decatur district and the Rio Nevado river is so unprospected. Its position leaves no doubt in regard to its being rich in minerals.

Carloads of coke from Kansas are coming in by way of Pueblo, over the new narrow gauge.

TRUSTEE'S SALE.

WHEREAS Joseph C. Wilson and James E. Wood executed their certain promissory note on the third day of April, A. D. 1874, for the sum of five thousand dollars, payable five years after date to D. Russ Wood or order, with interest at the rate of two per cent. per month until paid, payable monthly in advance, which said note is secured by a certain deed of trust executed by said Joseph C. Wilson and James E. Wood to William S. Jackson, as trustee, and dated the 3d day of April, A. D. 1874, and which said trust deed is recorded in the Recorder's office of El Paso County, Colorado Territory, in book [illegible] on page 414, by which said trust deed it is among other things provided that in case of default in the payment of said note or the interest thereon according to the tenor and effect of said note, it may and shall be lawful for said William S. Jackson to enter into and take possession of the premises in said deed of trust described and to sell and dispose of the same for the payment of said note and interest to the time of sale, together with all costs of such sale, and all right, title, interest, and equity of redemption of said Joseph C. Wilson and James E. Wood, their heirs and assigns, therein, after first having given public notice of such sale for thirty days, by publication in one of the newspapers at that time published in the town of Colorado Springs, and whereas default has been and still is made in the payment of the interest on said note, according to the tenor and effect thereof, and whereas the legal holder of said note has elected to declare both principal and interest of said note due and payable by the terms of said trust deed, he is expressly empowered to do, and has requested me to advertise and sell the premises in said deed of trust described, as therein provided, for the payment of said note and all interest due thereon to the time of sale, together with the costs attending the execution of this trust;

Now, therefore, I, William S. Jackson, Trustee, by virtue of the terms and conditions of said trust deed and by virtue of the power therein vested in me, do hereby give public notice that I shall, on Monday, the 8th day of May, 1876, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of said day, at the front door of the court house, to wit: at the front door of the County Clerk's office in the town of Colorado Springs, county of El Paso, and territory of Colorado, sell at public auction to the highest bidder for cash all the premises in said trust deed described, to wit: lot No. seventeen (17) in block No. ninety two (92) in the town of Colorado Springs, county of El Paso, and Territory of Colorado, with all the buildings thereon and appurtenances thereunto belonging, and all the right, title, interest, and equity of redemption of said Joseph C. ROUND ABOUT THE TERRITORY.

Work has been suspended on the Dual Mine for the present.

Cañon City has a new hotel, style etc. the "Sanderson House."

Longoner Brothers, of Denver, are preparing to open a store in El Moro.

The Russia Mine will send a big chunk of mineral to the Centennial.

Cattle are worth four and one-half dollars per pound down on the Las Animas.

The town board of South Pueblo has selected E. S. Nettleton as chairman.

The first meeting of the Territorial Board of Health was held in Denver last week.

The Cañon City Times has opened a portion of its space to a Temperance Department.

The postoffice at Ouray, La Plata County, has been discontinued by order of the Department.

An invoice of forty Chinamen arrived in Denver recently, en route for the Las Animas County placers.

Rosita is to be appropriately represented at the Centennial by several tons of ore from her best mines.

The county commissioners are about to have the old court house at Pueblo thoroughly repaired.

A specimen of the carnivorous plant has been found on the bank of the Arkansas River at Cañon City.

Students are coming in at the Colorado School of Mines at Golden, and the assay department is receiving a liberal patronage.

It is believed that a larger acreage of corn, wheat, and other cereals will be tilled in Fremont County this season than ever before.

Hon. T. B. Chaffee has sailed from Liverpool, on the steamer Adriatic, for New York, after an absence of seven months in Europe.

The Register says: Mr. Thatcher, of the First National, is collecting specimens of Gilpin County ores for the Centennial.

Kansas has twelve Centennial Commissioners to our two. The whole dozen are limited to $3,000 for salaries and personal expenses.

E. S. Nettleton and S. B. Rickerson, of the Quaker Mills, South Pueblo, have taken down at Del Norte looking after the San Juan four trade.

The Times says a new town has been laid out at the foot of Poncho Pass at a point where the trails from Denver, Del Norte, and Pueblo unite.

The recent town election at Cuchuras was, according to the Walsenburg Independent, quite an exciting affair, about sixteen votes being polled.

The Colorado Ore Dressing and Smelting Company have started up their dressing works at Black Hawk, and are operating on low-grade ores.

The main tunnel on the London Lode is now in 150 feet, and at this point a large and rich vein of ore, four feet in width, has been encountered.

The Sunshine Courier learns that a daily mail service has been ordered between that place and Boulder, and that the contract will be let as soon as possible.

Sample assays from the Carolus Magnus are as follows: First class ore, 546 ounces; average pay streak, gangue rock, crevice material and all, 78 ounces.

The heads of two bucks that were captured near Cañon City last Fall, with their antlers interlocked, will be suitably mounted and sent to the Centennial.

The Humboldt is now down to a depth of two hundred feet. Levels are being run at that depth, and a large quantity of very rich ore is being extracted.

Baker & Chellers, publishers of the Rosita Index, take the editorial management since the retirement of Mr. Posey, and now propose to run the thing alone.

The First Lewis hands are working 30 men and producing three tons of first class ore per day. The ore is being increased as fast as the mine is opened.—Rosita Index.

The owners of the Emmet Lode, in the Summit District, are making arrangements to drive a tunnel cut into that lode as soon as the season and work can be commenced.

A man employed getting out timber for the river bridge of the Arkansas River wagon road, last week, was severely cut on the head by falling on his ax while descending a hill.

It is reported that the bottoms of the old furnaces in the Swansea works, near Denver, contain a large amount of silver, which is now being taken from them in the smelting furnace.

Commissioner Richmond has secured the use of a spacious room in the Lowther Block on Main Street, Pueblo, for the storage of all articles intended for exhibition at the Centennial until such time as they can be made.

The Hubert Mine, near Centre, is paying handsomely. The crevice contains from three to four feet of iron and lead ore. The former is sold to the Black Hawk smelting works, and the latter is forwarded to the Golden works.

The town election at Rosita resulted in the election of Aleck Thornton, Chas. Rognon, Tower Thomasson, A. C. Cheney, and Jas. A. Gooch, as trustees; John H. Geary, clerk; W. W. Chisholm, constable; Henry Striver, street commissioner.

The La Plata Miner learns that a new stage line will be established at Parrott City, some time the coming season, with Judge Crosby as editor. The same authority also says the indications are that the snow will be off the passes at a much earlier period than usual.

Lafler & McKay, owners of the Eben Lode, located on James Creek, Boulder County, sold 144 pounds of Eben ore to Prof. Hill, lately, for which they received $918, or at the rate of $12,700 per ton. This is more than the Black Hills have thus far produced.—Tribune.

The Golden Smelting Works have increased their capacity by using the furnaces erected by the Western Smelting Company at Black Hawk, for the purpose of roasting a certain class of ores for the Golden works. The capacity of the Black Hawk roaster is five tons per day.

William A. Graham, who was injured some time since by being caught in a wire rope at Sloan's saw-mill, died in Denver last week. The deceased had resided in Denver several years, and served in a Colorado regiment during the war. He joined the First Baptist Church but a few days before the accident occurred.

A correspondent of the Chieftain, writing from the new town of Nepesta, says: A good blacksmith could do a good business here, as many of the ranchmen have to stop right in the busy season and go to Pueblo to have a horse shod or a plow sharpened, making it rather inconvenient.

The Register says: That the Eureka Mine, in Prosser Gulch, owned and worked by Alex. Taylor, is paying handsome profit. "Some years ago, the owner lost heavily in developing this mine, on account of leaving the pay vein sinking the shaft. Last fall he resumed work, removed the water, and at a depth of 80 feet came upon a spendid body of ore, that up to this time shows no signs of becoming exhausted. The ore body has been from three to five feet wide, and much of it has yielded five ounces or more of gold per ton."

We are indebted to the Rosita Index for the following mining items: The Leavenworth, leased and worked by Jones, Griffith, Webb & Co., is down 110 feet, and turning out good quantities of rich ore. Levels will be started at 125 feet. The Invincible, down 170 feet, is working ten men, and turning out good ore. The Good Hope is down 100 feet, and is yielding some good ore. The San Francisco, Dickson & Co., 70 feet deep, has a four-inch streak of galena and gray copper. A contract has been let to sink it to the depth of 100 feet. The 26 Junior, Jones, Smith & Co., is in 50 feet on the vein, and shows a good streak of rich mineral. The Great Leviathan is sinking a new shaft on the Dolphin as vein, and at 20 feet shows some rich ore.

Colfax has made $12,000 by lecturing since last Summer.

Mrs. Scott-Siddons has sailed for Sidney, Australia.

William Cullen Bryant, poet, has thin limbs, clad in black.

The New York Herald advocates Longfellow for the English mission.

Barney Williams, the actor, reported to be dying, is getting better.

Queen Victoria has presented Mr. Disraeli with her portrait painted in oil by a German artist.

Baron Rothschild is the hardest-working banker in Paris. He devotes twelve hours a day to business.

Prince Gortchakoff and Count Andrassy have added to the burden of their titles that of Grandee of Spain.

Mrs. Mary Clemmer has entirely recovered from her recent severe illness. She will pass the Summer in Philadelphia.

George Smith, the Assyriologist, has left England, to resume his explorations of the site of the royal temple at Nineveh.

Mr. L. A. Gudard, a Frenchman living at Rome, has presented the city of Philadelphia with a mosaic portrait of Washington.

Before the great Boston fire in 1873, Patrick Donahue, the proprietor of the Pilot, who recently failed, was worth $1,000,000.

Congressman Lamar's health has improved; but he is constantly threatened with paralysis, of which he has already had one attack.

Dr. Tait, Archbishop of Canterbury, actually pronounced the benediction over the opening of the London hospital, in an ulster overcoat.

The Russians are so well pleased with Annie Louise Cary's singing that she has been engaged for next season at St. Petersburg and Moscow.

It is stated on good authority that Schenck will not return to England as Minister, no matter what may be the result of the Emma Mine investigation.

Alex. T. Stewart left the largest fortune that has ever been accumulated in this country, if not in the world, in the course of a single life-time, in regular legitimate business.

Walt Whitman has risen "upon his ear." He indignantly denies that he is either in poverty or distress. Mr. Buchanan had better put that in his poetry and ventilate it.

The Princess of Wales, according to a polite fiction, is left in charge of England during the absence of the Queen on the Continent and pending the return of the Prince.

Among the recent passengers by the steamship Germanic was Lieutenant-Governor Holt, of Michigan, who has returned from an extended tour in Egypt and the Holy Land.

The statue of Abraham Lincoln, erected at Washington to his memory by the colored people of the country, was unveiled on the 14th in the presence of about 20,000 persons.

Ex-Governor Ames, of Mississippi, has since his resignation been staying in New Orleans, and is soon to leave for Massachusetts, where, it is supposed, he will make his home.

Mr. Thomas Steele Livingstone, eldest son of the African traveler, died at Alexandria a short time ago, where he has resided for the past three years for the benefit of his health.

One of the first fugitive slaves that came to Oberlin, Ohio, a woman, said to be the veritable Eliza of "Uncle Tom's Cabin," who crossed the Ohio on floating ice, died in Oberlin a short time ago.

Emma, the young lady for whom the famous mine is named, is a pupil at Miss Grant's finishing school in Washington. She is handsome, blonde, and the daughter of Robert Bruce Chisholm, of Elgin.

The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Augsburg Allgemeine Zeitung, maintains that the Czar really intended to abdicate, but the idea was abandoned in consequence of the restoration of his health.

Don Pedro is a prince of ancient and illustrious lineage, directly descended from the houses of Bourbon, Braganza, and Hapsburg, a scholar of no mean reputation, and a gentleman of the finest culture.

Mr. Sothern, the actor, has been advised by his physician to discontinue performing the character of Lord Dundreary. It is feared that the constant repetition of his facetious sayings will impair his intellect.

It is reported that President Grant is anxious to sell his Long Branch mansion before the expiration of his term, and that he is looking for a purchaser. It is also said that the President will spend the Summer at Newport instead of the Branch this year.

It is proposed to ask Lafayette and Rochambeau, the grandsons of the great Frenchman who helped America during the Revolution, to visit the International Exhibition, and to bring them to us and return them to France by the United States frigate Franklin, now in the Mediterranean.

Pope Pius IX. is not only a man of the purest artistic sense and culture in music, but a master of the organ and a remarkable singer. His voice is even now very sweet and powerful, and when he sings at High Mass all who hear him are struck by the superb manner in which he executes the Gregorian chant.

The young Prince of Servia is in a very uncomfortable predicament. He was married a few months ago, and the magnificence of the raiment provided for his bride was the talk of Paris. He dare not venture outside his palace doors, for there is a pretender to the throne who is only too anxious to get a shot at the unfortunate young man.

By the death of Miss Julia B. Newberry, which happened recently in Rome, Chicago will come into two or two and a half millions of dollars, to be devoted to the establishment of a public library. Her father, the late Walter L. Newberry, left a fortune of between four and five millions to his daughters, one-half of which was to revert to the city in case of the death of either, for the purpose named.

When Fred Grant, so the story goes, was urged by his partner in the late banking business to influence government business through his father, he replied: "No; I do not permit father to have any interest or part in this house. I won't ask him to do me in any way. Everybody makes use of him, and he has to stand the brunt of it. We can close up the place, and I can go back to my regiment." He stuck to his determination at the risk of much browbeating. The house is closed, but the President suffered no misapprehension from its transactions.

The will of the late A. T. Stewart was filed on the 14th. By its provisions all his property and estate is bequeathed to his wife and her heirs forever, and Judge Henry Hilton, who is made administrator, receives $1,000,000. His executors are directed to distribute gifts in sums of $5,000 to $20,000 to certain employes who served him long and faithfully, and in smaller sums to the servants of his household. Bequests are also made to old friends and to the relatives of his wife. He leaves a letter to his wife, asking her to complete his various plans for the welfare of his fellow-beings, and also requesting her to give a sum of money to each employe who has been in his service a number of years. Among the duties assigned to Judge Hilton is to bring Mr. Stewart's partnership affairs to a termination, and, as far as possible, without loss to those connected with him in business.

OATS.

80 TO 80 BUSHELS PER ACRE!

The Russian Oats.

SOMETHING NEW!

FARMERS READ THIS!

Agents Wanted in every County.

THESE Oats have lately been introduced into this country and prove to be the best now known. The attention of farmers is specially invited to this new cereal, which for their prolific qualities, hardiness and perfect adaptation to every variety of soil and climate, makes them a peculiar favorite wherever introduced. Their yield is enormous—being from 60 to 80 bushels per acre. They are strictly rust-proof. A package that will yield from 40 to 50 bushels of Oats, with circulars giving special terms to agents and full instructions as to time and manner of sowing, will be sent pre-paid in any part of the United States or Canada, on receipt of $1.00 for three packages for $2.00; one dozen packages, $6.00; half bushel, $3.50; one bushel, $6.00. These Oats we offer are fresh and genuine seed of last year's production.

Now is the time to procure your seed, so as to be prepared for early fall sowing. Address
